

ENGLISH

Real Opportunities

When you major in English, you study everything, because literature is about the world—including science, politics, human behavior, history, religion, philosophy, economics, music, art, and film. English is the major for people who are curious, and love to read and love to learn. English at UW-Parkside requires courses in both writing and literature, keeping your career options open by grounding your education in reading, writing, and analysis—three skills that employers consistently say that they want. You can then transfer what you've learned to more specialized training in graduate or professional school, or the workplace.

Career Outlook

English students bring literature to life. Here's is an example of students actively studying Shakespeare's Titus Andronicus!

Courses You'll Take

- Epic and Myth
- Young Adult Literature
- Shakespeare
- Literature into Film
- Professional Editing

Amazing Results

An English major is excellent preparation for any career, or graduate or professional school. English majors go on to become, among many others, technical writers, script and speech writers, librarians and archivists, lawyers, doctors, fiction writers, journalists, teachers, publishers, editors, publicists, program coordinators, and even congressional aides. Plus, your English degree can help you travel the world by teaching abroad, since English is the most sought-after second language in the world.

Your Parkside Experience

- Two student-run publications, including international literary journal, Straylight
- Active Sigma Tau Delta (English honor society) chapter
- Certificate in Creative Writing, Cinema Studies, and Professional Writing and Communication
- Dedicated, experienced, and creative faculty
- Teacher certification via our English Language Arts major

CONTACT INFO:

Dr. Mary Lenard
Phone: 262-595-2018
Email: lenard@uwp.edu

900 Wood Road
P.O. Box 2000
Kenosha, WI 53141-2000